The streets of Huntingdon have suffered more this winter than they have for many seasons and it is going to take a great deal of work to put them in good condition again. The people should be as patient as possible, for this kind of work can't all be done in a day. It is the purpose of the street committee to have some good work done this spring if possible. There is much good work needed.

Prof. E. R. Williams, assisted by Miss Anna Fowler, recently closed a very successful school at Lavinia. It is said to have been one of the best schools ever taught at that place. Our good friend, M. P. Strayhorn, one of the citizens of that community, was in town Saturday and he says the patrons of this school are making a strong effort to secure the same faculty for another year. They have offered Prof. Williams $1,000 for eight months service and Miss Fowler's salary is to be in addition to this. They are much interested in their school and are in earnest about securing the same

W. E. Townes had rather an exciting experience one day last week. Mr. Townes was making a point in middle Tennessee and had to cross Lick creek, which was considerably swollen from the heavy rain the night before. His driver not being thoroughly advised as to the condition of the crossing, drove into the creek and was soon in swimming water. They could not turn around so they pressed the team on to the opposite bank. As the team undertook to make the landing up a steep bank the top of the buggy broke off, spilling Mr. Townes and his driver into the swollen stream. After swimming a few yards they made a safe landing, but Mr. Townes says that was the wettest water he ever came in contact with. They had to drive several miles in their wet clothing.

"Liked to Be Gulled."

Sir William Gull, the well-known London physician, was once the victim of an amusing piece of repartee on the part of a fellow practitioner. The occasion was a dinner party at which several distinguished medical men were present. The conversation happened to turn upon the subject of quackery, and Sir William Gull expressed his conviction that a certain amount of it was essential to success in practice, adding: "It is an example of the old saying, 'Populus vult decipi' (people like to be deceived)." "Quite so," said the host; "now, can any one present give an English equivalent to that?" "Nothing easier," dryly remarked a well-known physician of one of the Manchester hospitals. "The public liked to be gulled."

Prosaic "Ghost."

Thinking they had seen a "ghost," a number of Dundee (Scotland) townsfolk, while walking through the cemetery recently, took to their heels and summoned the nearest gatekeeper. The "vision" which had aroused their alarm—that of a figure in scanty attire standing behind a gravestone, had vanished when they returned with reinforcements, and all there was to be seen was a large piece of red flannel. It afterwards transpired that the owner being greatly irritated by the flannel, which was next the skin, had gone to the cemetery with the idea of getting rid of it, which he could not do without shedding his garments.
